Final Dance of Academic Year

FITTING CLIMAX

Many Happy Friendships
Renewed

An exuberant spirit of festivity reigned supreme in the transformed Union last night on the occasion of the Alma Mater Dance—the crowning social event of the year.

Metamorphosed with fairy-like deftness from its commonplace club-like atmosphere into a veritable series of enchanting gardens opening out from charming nooks, improvised for the occasion, the Union displayed last night the gayest holiday attire which it has ever assumed in the memory of the present undergraduate body.

Shortly after the dinner hour, the doors of the Union were closed to permit a few last minute touches, and re-opened at eight to admit the first arrivals of the evening.

The Union has seldom presented a more colorful scene where fashion's last decree deposed itself in a setting of gay decorations. Evergreens in the rotunda and in the large staircase gave place to palms on the first floor suggestive of the balmy breezes of the Hawaiian isles, and singularly appropriate to the decorative scheme of the first floor ball room where Cloutier's orchestra dispensed the requisite dance music.

Up in the main hall room, suggestive of quaint Japan, a huge dragon done in fiery colors, contrasted sharply with its somber background of dark blue drapery.

Before a silent Buddha at one end of the hall burned an offering of incense, while at the other extremity a cleverly concealed moon peeped from its hiding place at the appropriate moment. A revolving Klieg light provided a beautiful kaleidoscopic effect. Here Glen Adney's orchestra, arrayed in "celestial" attire, was responsible for the melodious strains.

Planting the rotunda, the two dining halls counted orderly rows of tables where cut flowers and shining silver were set on gleaming white linen, while Pierre's department—the dispensary of countless delicacies—was screened from direct view by a Japanese drape.

Among the graduates in attendance were "Hammy" Hamilton, ex-president of the Students' Council; and E. Mills, ex-president of the McGill Daily. Mr. Taschereau represented the U. of M., and Mr. Roy Smith represented Queen's University. The patronesses were Lady Currie, Miss Ethel Hurlbutt, Mrs. Ira MacKay, Mrs. H. A. Smith, Mrs. Charles Martin, Mrs. F. D. Adams and Mrs. Thornton; and among those present were:

BOX-OFFICE OPENS NOON ON MONDAY

Theatre Seats Obtainable at Union

FINAL CHANCE

Reduced Rates Are to be Discontinued After To-day

Today is the last chance to secure exchange tickets and reduced rates. Any student who has been unable to obtain exchange tickets from his class representatives will be able to do so at the Union ticket office tomorrow. That there is going to be a large turnout to the revue there is now absolutely no doubt, practically all the 75 cent seats have been snapped up; there is, however, still a number of excellent 50 cent seats to be had. Many are under the impression that these are poor positions; this is not so. The St. Denis is a very compact theatre and the actors are audible over the entire building. This was one of the reasons for choosing this theatre to hold the revue in.

On Monday at noon the Union and the St. Denis box offices open their doors to make exchanges. There will be wickets to receive outside orders and an equal number of the best seats at both offices. A great deal of interest is being taken in the revue by people outside the university. The success of the Revue largely depends upon outside support. Seats are on sale at Macdonald College and it is expected that there will be a good representation from Ste. Annes.

The second general rehearsal is called for this afternoon. This is the last of its kind, and the next weekend will see the first dress rehearsal. The times for the different skits are as follows:

R.V.C., 1.30; M.S.P.E., 2.00;

Science, 3.00; Medicine, 3.30; Law,

4.00; Arts, 4.30.

THE IDEAL UNIVERSITY.

"In an ideal university, as I conceive it, a man should be able to obtain instruction in all forms of knowledge and discipline in the use of all the methods by which knowledge is obtained. In such a university, the force of living example should fire the student with noble ambition to emulate the learning of learned men, and to follow in the footsteps of the explorers of new fields of knowledge. And the very air he breathes should be charged with that enthusiasm for truth, that fanaticism of veracity, which is a greater possession than rich learning; a nobler gift than the power of increasing knowledge; by so much greater and nobler than these, as the moral nature of man is greater than the intellectual; for veracity is the heart of morality."

PROTECTION OF PUBLIC'S FOODSTUFFS

Mr. A. Papineau Couture at Chemical Society

A NEW FILTER.

Dr. Greaves Demonstrated
New Device to Remove Impurities

Although most of the larger food-stuff manufacturers who possess the patronage of the Canadian people have come to realize that honesty is the best policy, mistakes are still sometimes made. The work that the Food and Drug Laboratories of the Department of Health are doing in order to safeguard the welfare of the public from such mistakes was the subject of a paper which Mr. A. Papineau Couture read to the members of the Chemical Society in the Macdonald Chemistry Building yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Couture thought that the Food people are aware of the existence of the Food and Drug Laboratories they do not attach much importance to their work. But when the public begins to realize how the government is taking precautions to protect the bodily welfare of its citizens, interest in the work of the Department of Health's Laboratories will increase.

Mr. Couture thought that the Food and Drugs Act, since it is the most comprehensive of all the acts of this class, is the most important. By this act offenders can be punished for, and prevented from, making adulterations in anything that is eaten or drunk by man, or used for medicinal purposes. There are other separate smaller acts whose existence is rendered necessary by the general terms in which the Food and Drugs Act, in order to make it applicable to all cases, is couched.

In spite of the fact that the various municipal authorities, except in very unusual circumstances, look after the supplies of milk, meat, and vegetables, the Food and Drug Laboratories have done a great deal of important work. Mr. Couture mentioned some of the tests they had made to insure the purity of pepper, ginger, vinegar, cloves, coffee, and flavourings. He told of the amusing discovery of the use of coloring materials to give their sausages an appearance of freshness by some of the smaller sausage makers. This, and many similar abuses the Food and Drug Laboratories had prevented.

Owing to the tests which have been conducted at the Department of Health's Laboratories restrictions have been placed on the adulteration of drugs for medicinal purposes. Sometimes, Mr. Couture stated, the manufacturers have been at fault, and sometimes the druggists were to blame. In the work on drugs the

ALL STUDENTS TO MEET WEDNESDAY

No Lectures During Society
Meeting March 19

All lectures at the University will be cancelled between 11 and 1 o'clock on Wednesday, March 19th, so that every student in every faculty can attend the annual meeting of the Students' Society. This will be held in the Union Ball Room.

The annual reports of all the Clubs will be read before the meeting. E. C. Amaron (if possible) and G. H. Fletcher will be in charge. The report from the Union House Committee for this year will be given by Jim Packham, the President. It will deal partly with the re-decoration and renovation carried on in the Union and the Cafeteria during the past months. Other yearly reports will be from the "Daily," the Students' Council, the different Athletic Clubs—Track, Hockey and Rugby, and the Music Club.

One reason why every student should be present at the Society is because of the very important issues to be discussed. The five-dollar athletic levy suggested some time ago, has become a "burning question."

Besides debate on this, there will be other discussions on the election of presidents for the Canadian Club, Literary and Debating Society, and Literary Association by general vote; and also for election by ballot of a

RAILWAY PRESIDENT SPEAKS TO MEDICALS

With music supplied by a well-known undergraduate orchestra and a man renowned throughout Canada for speaker, the Medical Undergraduate Society's open meeting which will be held at 8 p.m. on Monday night promises to be a huge success.

E. W. Beatty B.A., K.C., the chancellor of the university and president of the C. P. R. has consented to give a talk on Canadian affairs. The Medical students have been very fortunate in securing this prominent man as speaker for their meeting.

It will be one of the first occasions that Mr. Beatty has spoken to the students of McGill since his connection with the university as chancellor and the Executive of the Society has decided to throw the meeting open to members of all the other faculties.

The orchestra which will play at the meeting is Willard Crocker's the one that usually performs at the Medical Undergraduate Society meetings. Another customary feature on the program will be the serving of refreshments.

TENNIS MAJOR SPORT AT MANY COLLEGES

Tennis is a major sport at 27 colleges and universities, says a circular of the United States Lawn Tennis Association. In six other colleges it is classified as a minor sport carrying with it the reward of varsity letter. The Intercollegiate Association in conjunction with the national organization sent questionnaires on this subject to the leading schools of the country and received replies from 102 institutions.

That tennis, as a college sport, is making rapid strides throughout all sections of the country is proved by these statistics gathered on the subject the association believes. Both as a varsity sport and a means of recreation for undergraduates, the court game is assuming a popular place among the leading intercollegiate athletic activities of the day.

The demand for tennis equipment at Harvard University far exceeds the supply and plans are being made for eighty tennis courts there in the spring.

MONTREAL, SATURDAY, MARCH 15, 1924.

AN IMPORTANT ENGLISH WORD.

Lists, comprising the six most fundamentally important words in the English language, were compiled recently at Princeton by President Hibben and other members of the faculty and of the college. To the word "loyalty" was attributed this distinction: that it was the one most universally included in the ten lists. If given the opportunity of expression our opinion on the same subject we would probably agree unanimously with the results obtained at Princeton, for on reflection, one cannot fail to be impressed with the thought that no other word in the English vocabulary means so much in what it pleases us to term "our enlightened civilisation." Without the existence of loyalty among men there could not be any social structure, as we know it, but instead a primitive society, where mutual distrust is rampant and concerted action almost wholly absent.

To be loyal to any person or institution implies faith. But when a time comes, as it too often does, that the reason for placing faith in an individual proves to be unfounded, cannot often survive, but turns into loathing and disgust, then the victims of such disillusionment are inclined to become sceptical and think that the best members of society at one time or another are unworthy of the loyalty of their fellow men, and that many members are not deserving of it at all. It is true, however, that our leaders, our friends if we choose them wisely, and those who in a position to command loyalty most, with few exceptions, worthy of it, although there are always some ignoble minds who contrive to debase that finest display of one person's faith in another.

In the darkest hours of his life, when he reached the depths of degradation through the curse of the opium habit, De Quincy tells of the unflinching loyalty of a friend. This was the sole remaining ray of sunshine in the shadow of his existence. Without it he would probably have succumbed in a losing battle against the drug. The friendship of most of us is not of such a calibre that it would endure such a test. But it is seldom that it is called upon to do so. With far slighter provocation our loyalty often ceases.

It should be our endeavour, as representatives of an institution which aims to develop the best qualities in students, to cultivate the capacity for being loyal, and to never give reason for being undeserving of the loyalty of others.

THE ALMA MATER.

It would be hard to adequately express, in mere words, the absolute success which attended the Alma Mater, held last night in the Union. Undisturbed enjoyment reigned supreme throughout the evening, and into the early hours of the morning, and the general consensus of opinion—and to this we are heartily in accordance—is that the dance was one of the most, if not the most, successful ever held in the congenial halls of the Union, the centre of nearly all undergraduate functions. Little can those realize, who were not in attendance, the extraordinary amount of labour, which was required in the preparation of this function. The workers spent hours—and then some—in decorating the interior of the building, and their creative effects were greeted with warm commendation from all quarters. The season is over, but it has come to an end in a blaze of colour and glory, and those who planned, who laboured, and who executed, are to be congratulated on the delightful perfection which they produced. Words again fail us, for after all, what more can be said.

LET THE REFORM COME FROM WITHIN

One can scarcely glance through any of the current magazines and newspapers without reading some article criticizing the American college of today and offering suggestions for its improvement. This is one manifestation of the tremendous reform which is taking place in American education at the present time.

It is especially to be noted that the majority of the criticisms are directed against the system of education itself; nearly all the suggestions are addressed to those in authority, to the rulers of the colleges' destinies, the trustees, the presidents and the faculties. The part of the student in the future, the upheaval, and the reconstruction of education has been neglected and his attitude conceded to be a passive one. This is due to the misconception that education is something that is done to the student, a dose which he docilely imbibes as his professor sees fit to administer to him. In reality education is something with a militant quality, something for which the student should strive, with a clear vision of the end to be attained.

The viewpoint of the student, the one whom the problem touches most vitally, is, then, extremely valuable. Let him awaken to his duty and responsibility and consider the implications against the system of which he is so integral a part. Let him examine his own culture, his own attitude, his own sense of responsibility, and he will find that the system of which he is a part is not so perfect as it seems. He will find that the system of which he is a part is not so perfect as it seems. He will find that the system of which he is a part is not so perfect as it seems.

them freely and make his influence felt whenever possible. Let him ponder carefully until he can formulate clearly-defined ideas upon such important subjects as the elective system, the place of athletics in college life, the point at which specialization should begin, the regulation of entrance examinations, and many others.

Then, when the reconstruction is no longer left entirely to educational councils and boards, and when it begins to come from within, when he who is nearest the heart of the matter begins to think intelligently about it, then reform will come much more quickly and will be many times more effective.—Middlebury Campus.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

One hundred students from the campus colleges of the University of Southern California have either been "flunked out" or placed on probation for the coming semester on account of the low grades they received last term.

Mr. Montgomery, registrar, said that this number does not seem large in comparison with the great number of students enrolled in the University. A different system of grading students and judging scholarship is used here than is used at California or Stanford Universities. He said that those schools "flunk out" a great number of students, but that fact does not necessarily indicate that they have higher scholarship standards.

Birthdays are like measles—everybody has to have them. The first birthday is usually a howling success. The others obey the law of diminishing happy returns.

Birthdays are celebrated with parties, when we are children, and with cases of Scotch when we are grown up. It is always chivalrous to remember a woman's birthday and to forget her age—if you can do it.

Birthdays are also celebrated with birthday cards, explaining that the older you grow the dearer you are, which is, of course, so, and with blow-outs or candles, which are innocent enough.

To insure the maximum of enjoyment birthdays should not be had more than once a year.

The number of birthdays allotted to individuals varies, according to life insurance companies, which have gone into the matter rather extensively. Their mortality talks are the last word in birthday data, and should be consulted by all people who live in the expectation of an estate.

The most interesting birthdays are the first (see above), the sweet sixteenth and the eighteenth (for girls), and the twenty-first. The sweet sixteenth is so named to suggest that the person celebrating has never been kissed, but you can use your own judgment. The eighteenth is the birthday that marks a young lady's freedom to marry with or without her parents' consent. If the golden opportunity presents itself. In this connection it may be remarked that all is not gold that glitters. The twenty-first is important for various reasons. It marks the formal termination of a fictitious parental authority, and is marked by the presentation of an expensive present from the ousted parents. It also means that a boy or girl is fit to get along without a guardian, which is often far from the truth; and on this day a man becomes legally responsible for what he does. A woman's responsibility is definitely postponed.

R.V.C. '24 CHOSE PUBLIC SPEAKERS

Miss Brooks and Miss Thomson on Convocation Committee

At a meeting of the R. V. C. '24 which was held on Thursday in the Common Room Miss Massey Bayly, Miss P. Murry, and Miss C. Robertson were chosen to represent the class in the public speaking contest to be held at the next meeting of the Delta Sigma Society, on Thursday, March 20th.

Miss Brooks and Miss Thomson were elected as the R. V. C. '24 members of the Convocation Committee.

At a recent meeting of the R.V.C. Undergraduate Society it was decided that each year be asked to donate a minimum of $10 from the class fund for the support of Crosby Hall, a building in England to be used as a club house for University women from all over the British Empire. It was decided that the class give $10 to the Undergraduate Society for this object.

At the close of the meeting the President reminded the class of the tickets to be sold for the R. V. C. gymnasium exhibition, urging them to give their support in order to make this event a success, and also of the Theatre Night tickets which are to be purchased before Saturday.

Flunking a Sixth-Grade Subject

Four primary causes present themselves to the teacher for the "why" of the much lamented failures in freshman English composition says the Indiana Daily Student.

Lack of proper high school training, inefficient instruction on the part of the University English faculty, lack of supervised study, and lack of interest on the part of the student himself are the more popular reasons advanced.

None of the student diagnosticians, however, has had the temerity to lay the blame at the door of the state board of education. The present ruling of the state board requires instruction in grammar only through the sixth grade. No compulsory instruction in grammar in high schools ever has been required, but formerly this subject was required through the sixth, seventh and eighth grades.

State board officials, it is understood, exonerate their lowering of the standards by stating that school must be made attractive enough to appeal to pupils of more than 16 years of age, the limit for compulsory attendance. They also hold that as only 20 percent of the graduates of Hoosier high schools continue their education in colleges and universities, the entire student body should not be required to take some subject which will better fit those going on to college.

Three possibilities for the correction of the present situation present themselves.

The state board of education should renege the previous ruling requiring instruction in grammar through the eighth grade and include compulsory training through the high school course, for the oral and written English of every man, whether he be a graduate of grade school or college, is the basis for the world's snap judgment of him. Even at the time when this instruction was required through the eighth grade, students entering the University found difficulty with the required composition course.

The English department of the University should and could sponsor a state conference of high school English teachers for the discussion of prevalent problems. This plan has worked out to the advantage of both the high school and University faculties in the case of Latin teachers' conferences. The local department also should stress training in grammar for those intending to teach English. The ability to scan "Hiawatha" and to interpret Poe's "Raven" but with only a smattering of grammar, does not tend to induce a thorough knowledge of the subject in the next generation of students.

Although it is too bad that 19 percent of the enrollment in freshman composition will be required to repeat the semester's work, the student, even though his high school training was inadequate, should consider himself fortunate to have the opportunity of learning correct English.

With the stiffening of the state board requirements, the raising of the standard of high school English teachers and a changed attitude on the part of the student himself, freshman composition would no longer be the bugaboo of the entering student. Instead, University instructors could delve into the depths of descriptive writing with the incoming students and not have to labor with the fundamentals of syntax.

F. S. LAWRENCE, Captain and Adjutant, McGill Contingent C.O.T.C., Montreal, March 13, 1924.

CONCEIT. "The old believe everything; the middle-aged suspect everything; the young know everything," says Oscar Wilde. We cannot vouch for the veracity of the first two statements, but we know the third to be true. In fact, most of us are like the bantam cock who thought the sun got up every morning to hear him crow. We are proud of ourselves and waste no opportunity to display our worldliness, our powers of ratiocination, and our infinite knowledge of all that was, and is, and ever shall be.

When you can look around a roomful of people and think that each is a mere child in intellect compared with your honorable self, and feel no more trepidity in their presence than you would in front of a charming group of monkeys who were pleased to listen to you, you are merely showing your aptitude, your real desire, your recognition of duty, and divinely inspired fidelity to the rendering of service to mankind, in vying with your betters, who were designated by Darwin as your progenitors.

What unfortunate persons are our fathers and mothers, our teachers! They have had no experience whatever; they are so utterly ignorant of the great causes and results of "Things as They Are!" And you, with your mind, have reasoned it all out! Lucky indeed, have no need for experimenting, or the tabulation of history. For we, the college boys of the twentieth century have solved all the problems.

But, when you say, "Oh, I know all about the origin of things; I know this great scientist is dead wrong; I know that this man who has suffered and come into contact with that greatest of all teachers, 'Experience,' throughout a long and useful life, knows nothing in comparison to what I know!" can't you realize that the rest of the world is laughing at you?

Oh, you poor, deluded, self-appointed shams! May these vain, false, conceited, pseudo-ideas depart with your "growing pains" and chicken-pox!—Red and Black.

CURBING "GIDDY" PARTIES

President Marion L. Burton of the University of Michigan, says, "learning has a quiet and simple beauty all her own which deepens with the years. Our jazz bands, our whirling, giddy parties, our 'busts,' our proms, our hope, our moving picture shows, our joy rides all there and many other things, gather into a noisy, rushing rabble, and banish learning. They may have, they do have their proper place, but just now they occupy an unduly large place in student interest. The emphasis is false."

Curb "giddy" parties must then be one of the problems of modern education. For these institutions located in or near large cities, the problem becomes an unusually large one. There is no doubt but that the "learning" element in every institution does

DOCTOR LEACOCK ON CO-EDUCATION

Says Mixed Classes Are Detrimental

The following interview with Dr. Leacock was published in a recent issue of the Michigan Daily:

"I may be somewhat old-fashioned, but I do not consider co-education a good thing," said Stephen Leacock as he swung into his taxi at 11th and University last night. "Do not misunderstand me, I consider that a woman is vastly better off to have had a college education, but I do feel that men and women would both do better by themselves."

"There is no danger, in this age, of men not meeting members of the other sex," he continued. "Most of them have a very extended acquaintance before they enter college, and without the presence of the women they will apply themselves more vigorously to their studies and activities. At the same time, the women are better off by themselves. Girls do not speak freely in mixed classes, and gain most of their information by absorption, which does nothing toward developing their individuality."

"Colleges in the United States and Canada employ very similar methods, and I am not criticizing, but merely stating my opinion of the matter when I say that the educational system of England is more productive in real scholars and educated people than our own. Here we have a factory-like system, and the brilliant minds are given the least attention in the struggle to get the less gifted students through the courses." He also assailed "our tendency to pursue vague and futile studies."

MARRIAGE WON'T TAME WILD MALES

Men Not So Dumb as They Often Appear

Marriage seldom, if ever reforms a person, and the prevalent idea that the young man who sows his wild oats about the corners of his life will settle down quietly when he is married, is false, Dean Thomas Arkie Clark of the University of Illinois, told co-eds here.

Dean Clark is adviser for boys at the University of Illinois, holding the only position of this kind in the world. "Were I adviser for girls, I should try to let them see that the things which men often seem so blind to are usually perfectly understood; that the things they often seem to admire most, they care the least for; that the conventions against which they rail, they do not really despise."

"Natural manners, refined speech, natural complexions, natural restraint, a respect for conventionalities and constancy in friendship—I have learned that these are the qualities in women which appeal to men and ultimately win their respect."

"The ordinary advice which a young woman gets is from the point of view of a woman. There are many details which would be helpful to a woman if she could get a man's honest viewpoint—not what he says he thinks."

"Young men are quite likely to detect any subterfuge on the part of the girl, tho' they will not often reveal this knowledge. One weakness and deceit will lead them to suspect a dozen others. They have no confidence in either her word or character and in the end the girl suffers."

—University of Illinois

exist. The amount which it functions is dependent upon the natural opportunities which it has.

It may be that on account of our location we are unusually fortunate in not having a very menacing situation with regard to the "whirling, giddy parties." At least, we find the student body on the whole pretty sober minded with regard to social functions, pretty well restricted and guided by an industrious University social committee, and sufficiently cognizant of a set of rules which exist, and the lighter side of life.

President Burton continues, "The vital factor in university life is a persistent emphasis upon the intellectual, cultural, aesthetic and spiritual values."

As to that, Mr. we quite agree with you.

The real serious attitude toward university work is coming to be less and less apparent. Whether the fact is due to the increasing enrollments in colleges and universities, with a natural increase of those who are never satisfied or not, is hard to say.

But that the dissatisfied spirit, the restless urge which make book study, learning merely a background and not the main issue is increasing, we must admit from actual observation.

True, curbing giddy parties will in a measure remove some of the cause for this spirit. But can these thoughtless outbreaks of youthful enthusiasm be the entire cause of an attitude which is leaving the determined, serious, sober, and sincere desire for learning which actuated the scholars of the past in the background?

MEN IN HOSPITAL DOING VERY WELL

Errol Amarion and Randolph Howe Resting Comfortably Last Night

Two McGill men now in the Royal Victoria Hospital are doing quite well according to reports received by the Daily last night. Errol Amarion, ex-president of the Student's Council and "Randy" Howe of 3rd year Science were recently operated on and have been progressing well since Amarion's leg which he injured in a basketball game at Westpoint during the Christmas holidays, and which has kept him out of competitive sport ever since was again hurt. It was found that a tendon was badly ruptured and an operation was necessary. He went to the Royal Victoria about a week ago and the operation was performed. It has apparently been successful and last night he was reported to be doing very well. This injury to Amarion has been a great handicap to the senior basketball team of which he was captain, and the team in no small measure owe their lack of success to the absence their star player.

Howe of third year Science had an operation performed on him for tonsillitis a few days ago, and has been in the same ward as Amarion. His operation has been entirely successful and he is in hopes of leaving the hospital to-day.

PROTECTING THE LITTLE LAMBS

Evidently the reporter who garbled President Hopkins' speech at Chicago ten days or so ago had a taste for the dramatic. Reporters are often built that way, and sometimes what results shreds out for justice. President Hopkins does wisely to refrain from issuing a correction for the general public, but it comes as quite fitting that the college community such understand exactly what he did say. No one connected with Dartmouth objects particularly to the possibility of having Trotsky on the faculty, but since President Hopkins didn't suggest a step so far removed from the conventional path of college instruction. The Dartmouth is glad to be able to publish his correct statement.

But what if he had suggested that Trotsky be added to the faculty? If ever there existed a fear complex upon the part of anyone, here it is in this sniffling, haunting worry over the possibility that American undergraduates may hear the actual facts of life from those who are manipulating them. Apparently, the American college should nurse its infants only with the Nestle's Food of 100 Per Cent Indifference to Life. Apparently its chief job is to shoo off the wolves of discord while the lambs of conformity are petted and idolized and thrice blessed. And whatever you do, don't let the undergraduate hear the other side of the story! Poor boy, it might hurt his sensibilities! Much better let him play his innocent games, read his harmless books—and swallow everything whole. Undergraduates are so immature, you know,—and so unfit to see the seamy side of things! Of course! But President Hopkins disagrees and he has disagreed so persistently and so effectively that The Dartmouth takes occasion to republish a portion of a speech which he delivered a little less than a year ago before the Alumni Association of Chicago in which he came out unequivocally for complete freedom of speech before undergraduates:

"I have seen at the gates of the steel works in Pittsburgh; I have seen back of the Baldwin Locomotive Works in Philadelphia I have seen in the street of Schenectady; I have seen here at Hawthorn men pour out and go down the avenue after the day's work; and on every corner I have seen the soap box orator holding forth on the theory of this, that, or the other thing. I have seen young men of 16, 17, 18, 19 and 20 years of age as well as elders sitting down and listening to these things and then going off into the saloons or some other place and discussing for hours the propositions set forth. The man outside the college is not isolated from this. The man outside is not protected from it. On the other hand, the man outside is subjected to the presentation of a lot of asserted facts and a lot of requested data which somebody has got to disprove in future times, or allow him, to accept these as truth."

"Do you and I, we who are parents or who are alumni of Dartmouth College, desire that our sons shall go into the College and shall be by fallible men told uncertain facts in regard to changing situations, and turned out with the belief that they are possessed of final truth? Are we willing that our sons shall go out handicapped as they would be if they had never learned anything except the conventional and the orthodox doctrines which might be presented to them? Somebody say, 'But is not this dangerous?' It may be. But any other policy is infinitely more dangerous!"

The issue now as always is not whether a particular person is to be hired to lecture to or teach American undergraduates. The issue is whether American undergraduates are to be

Popular Lecturer to Speak on Sunday Night

A programme which is sure to prove very interesting has been arranged by the People's Forum for this Sunday evening. The speaker will be Mr. Alfred Martin, leader of the Society for Ethical Culture, New York. His subject will be: "Five Liberalizing Discoveries of the Modern World."

Anyone who can get to the meeting on Sunday evening is strongly advised to do so, for it is not very often that one gets a chance to hear such a speaker as Mr. Martin. The Forum have gone to a lot of trouble in getting a good programme, and in addition to Mr. Martin's address and the regular meeting, there will be a special musical recital. This will take the form of an organ and violin recital by George Brewer, F.A.G.O., and Miss Florence Hood.

Perhaps a few words in connection with Mr. Martin will not be amiss. Mr. Martin is a native of this city, being a brother of Dean Martin, of the Faculty of Medicine. He was educated at McGill, and afterwards at Harvard, and has since been connected with the Society for Ethical Culture on the Pacific Coast and in New York. In addition to this he attained the highest level in lecturing, being probably one of the most popular lecturers on this continent.

The meeting will open with the musical recital at seven o'clock, and both this and Mr. Martin's talk will be broadcasted by the courtesy of the Northern Electric Company, Limited. (C.H.V.C.)

The professor was very absent-minded, and one day as he came home after a heavy storm in a very big, dragged and wet state, his wife met him at the door. As he greeted her he made the remark that he had forgotten his umbrella, and his wife, surprised to think that he even remembered that he had forgotten anything, asked him when he had thought of it. "Why, my dear," he said, with a smile of satisfaction, "when it stopped raining and I went to shut it."—Ex.

"Which would you rather be—good or beautiful?" asked the teacher of the demure little girl in her class after an "improving" lesson. "Please, teacher," replied the eleven-year-old. "I think I'd rather be beautiful—and then repent."

"Well, if it wasn't Hector or Towser," said the voice, aggrievedly, "it must have been Nero. I know it was somebody with a dog's name."—The Boy's Own Paper.

LYNCHING IN NINE STATES DURING YEAR

Federal Council of Churches Issued Statistics

28 MOB MURDERS

Four States Have Never Had a Lynching in Boudaries

Washington, March 15.—Nine states bore the black shame of lynching in 1923, according to the Non-Lynching Roll of Honor of the Federal Council of Churches. These nine states were responsible for 28 mob murders. Twenty-six of the victims were negroes, two being women.

The Roll of Honor contains the names of 39 states which had no lynchings in 1923. Places on the Roll were earned during the last year by South Carolina, Alabama and Tennessee. It is the first year since comprehensive records on lynchings have been kept that South Carolina and Alabama have been free from the crime.

Only four states in the Union have never had a lynching. They are Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont. The lynchings of 1923 were confined to groups of states. All four of the West-Southern Central States were guilty of the crime. Three of the eight Southern Atlantic States, one of the four East-South Central States and one of the West-Northern Central States had lynchings.

The second annual announcement of the Roll of Honor is as follows: States that have never had a record of a lynching: Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont, 4.

Additional states which have no record of a lynching since 1886: Connecticut, Maine, New Jersey and Utah, 4.

Additional states that have no record of a lynching during the past ten years: Delaware, Idaho, Indiana, Iowa, Maryland, Michigan, Nevada, Pennsylvania, South Dakota and Wisconsin, 10.

Additional states which have no record for lynching in the past five years: Montana, Wyoming, New Mexico, Arizona, Oregon, New York and North Dakota, 7.

Additional states which have no record of a lynching during 1923: South Carolina, Alabama and Tennessee, 3.

Total states free of lynching in 1923, 39.

Total states still having mob murder, 9.

This is the second time that the Roll of Honor has been issued by the Commission on the Church and Race Relations of the Federal Council of Churches. It is based on records kept by Professor Monroe N. Work at Tuskegee Institute and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. They have been carefully checked. When the first Roll of Honor was issued it was challenged in many states, but when the records were checked over, only one or two adjustments were necessary.

There was a great reduction in the number of lynchings in 1923, when there were 28, the lowest number in any year since accurate records have been kept. The next lowest record was 38, in 1917, and the highest was 253, 1892. In that year there were lynchings in 32 states.

Many reasons are given for the great improvement in conditions. According to the Commission on the Church and Race Relations, "The campaign for interracial cooperation which includes the fight against lynching, has been started and built upon faith that Christians will join in a sound constructive plan to apply the principles of brotherhood and justice to race relations in America; that the principles of Jesus are sufficient to meet all the critical situations that confront us or that may arise, and that ways and means will be applied for enlisting the forces of the churches and communities."

"Christian men and women are facing the facts regarding lynching and are becoming aroused to the menace of it. The migration of negroes has aroused leading citizens also to enquire the cause, and lynching has been given as one. Tremendous educational campaigns have been carried on by the Federal Council of Churches, the Commission on Interracial Co-operation, the Women's Council, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, other groups of Southern church women and other organizations."

"The threat of the passage of the Dyer Anti-Lynching Bill by the United States Congress caused citizens and officials in many states to take means to stop lynchings. A similar bill has been introduced in the present Congress."

"Several states have passed stringent anti-lynching laws. In some of these laws the family of the victim is given the right to sue county in which

DIMINUTIVE DRAMAS REPEATED TO-NIGHT

Last Opportunity to See Alumnae and Faculty Plays

Tonight at 8.30 in the R.V.C. Convocation Hall the McGill Alumnae Society are repeating the Diminutive Dramas that were presented last Saturday night.

The performance of a week ago was such an unqualified success and the demand for tickets was so great that it was decided to give the public a second opportunity of seeing these plays, so that those who were unable to secure tickets last week may not be disappointed.

Four of the five "dramas" were written by members of the McGill staff, three being Dr. Leacock and one by Prof. Carless who also takes part in one of the plays. The cast is composed entirely of the members of the faculty and McGill graduates and delightful music is being supplied during the interval by the McGill Mandolin Club.

The subjects dealt with in the plays are varied and each one holds the interest of the spectator by virtue both of the plot and the skilful interpretations.

The cast is as follows:

"Suppressed Desires" by Susan Glaspell.
Cast:—
Prof. Herbert Smith.
Mrs. Herbert Smith.
Miss Jean Nichol.
"McGill, 1975." by William Carless.

Cast:—
Prof. Slack.
Prof. Waugh.
Dr. Woodhead.
Mr. Priestman.
"The Soul Call." by Stephen Leacock.

Cast:—
Mrs. C. Sutton.
Miss Mabel King.
Miss Helen Kydd.
Col. Thompson.
Mr. J. J. Hackett.
Mr. J. Taylor.

"The Sub-Contractor," by Stephen Leacock.

Cast:—
Mrs. J. G. Stewart.
Miss Winifred Birkett.
Prof. Carruthers.
Prof. Carless.
Violinist—Miss Anna Dale.
Pianist—Miss Eleanor Cowie.

"A Russian Drama," by Stephen Leacock.

Cast:—
Miss Mary Fry.
Miss Stuart Forbes.
Mr. J. Taylor.
Mr. A. Noad.
Mr. Etienne Bleier.
Mr. Priestman.
Prof. Carruthers.
Prof. Carless.

The funds derived from the Diminutive Dramas are to help in the Canadian University Women's Federation Scholarships, the Hospital Library, the University Settlement, and the maintenance of Crosby Hall in London.

Tickets for the second performance may be obtained from the Secretary of the R.V.C., the McGill Library, Miss May Idler, 583 University Street, Apt. 445, and Miss Mildred Robertson, 383 Lansdowne Ave., Westmount 0551.

LIGHTS OUT IN OREGON

"I'd like to speak to Mr. Fisher," said the aggrieved feminine voice, yesterday, "the electricity is off, and I can't do my ironing."

"I'm sorry," wearily answered the University depot stenographer for the thirtieth time, "but the lights are out all over the city."

The tale of woe was almost instantly continued, this time by a man. "Listen here," he said, "my electric heaters are off, how soon are you going to get them working again?"

Hardly had the outraged man been down upon the trembling depot floor. His white jacket was flying, as he said: "Listen here, I have a boy over there with a sprained ankle I must take a picture of it. What are you going to do about it?"

The telephone rang, and an irate professor was informed that the lights were out all over the city. A janitor peevishly announced that he wanted something done to the lights in his building, and the telephone rang again.

Yes, the lights were out all over the city.

One day Darwin couldn't find the golf grounds, but after walking quite a while, he spied them and shouted: "Ah ha, at last, the missing links!"

The crime occurs. The widow of a negro lynched in South Carolina obtained a verdict of $2,000 under such a law. Officers of the law are becoming more active in preventing lynchings as public opinion demands it.

"Lynching will cease entirely when public opinion will no longer tolerate mob murder because the great body of Christian people regard those who participate in mobs as criminals."

DR. J. W. A. HICKSON WILL GIVE ADDRESS

Philosophical Society to Celebrate Birth of Kant

The next meeting of the Philosophical Society will take place in Strathcona Hall on Wednesday 19th March, at 8.15 p.m., when Dr. J. W. A. Hickson, late Frothingham Professor of Logic and Metaphysics, will give an address, "In remembrance of Kant—critical and historical."

The 22nd of April is the two hundredth anniversary of Immanuel Kant (1724-1804) and the chief Philosophical centres on both sides of the Atlantic ocean are to celebrate the birth of a philosopher who is one of the greatest, if not the greatest, of modern times.

Kant was born at Konigsberg and his grandfather was an emigrant from Scotland where the name Kant is not uncommon. He started as a most promising literary scholar but during his university course which began in 1740, became attracted to mathematics and physics. At the death of his father, however, he was compelled to work as a tutor for nine years, after which time he resumed his University career and graduated as a Doctor and qualified as Privatdozent in 1755.

During the fifteen years he laboured in this position, Kant's fame as a writer increased. He failed twice to obtain a professorship at Konigsberg, but he steadily refused appointments elsewhere. Kant's lectures were first mainly upon Physics, but were gradually expanded until nearly all descriptions of philosophy was included under them.

Eleven years after his occupation of the chair of Logic and Metaphysics at Konigsberg, there appeared Kant's greatest work, the "Critique of Pure Reason," and in the 1783, the "Prolegomena to every future Metaphysics." Within about ten years the Kritik was expounded from all the leading universities and young men flocked to Konigsberg as to a shrine of Philosophy. Kant, however, continued his lecturing, writing and normal mode of life, unaffected by this universal homage.

It seems very significant for the subsequent development of Kant's philosophy that his early activities were scientific and critical. Such papers as the "Theory of the Heavens" for the forerunner, and probably the inspiration, of Laplace's monumental work, "Theory of the Winds." "On the Causes of Earthquakes," "Volcanoes on the Moon," and "Different Races of Men." Surely every philosopher could discipline himself in science at an early age and in so doing be sure that in following Kant's splendid example he comes nearer the high road to knowledge.

It is to be regretted that the celebration at McGill must be so early due to the coming pressure of examinations, but it is hoped that this meeting will be the largest of the year.

All interested are cordially invited to attend.

ELECTRICIANS TO HOLD FINAL FEED

Ampere-Chasers Dine at "Queen's"

In this time of class banquets, annual meetings, and final functions, and in the face of only a few more studying weeks till exams, the "Electricians" are reminded that the great event of their year is almost upon them. The date is Wednesday, March 19, the place—Queens Hotel; the time—supper time; the chief amusement with this highly honored occupation, eating. This time of day, coupled should be enough to have every "Electrician" on hand, but, better still, that's only the first part of it. Those who accomplish the above will proceed with further enjoyment, the full details of which are still to a large extent in "the lap of the Gods." That there is to be entertainment is known, but as form—one must wait and see.

Tuning to the serious side, the Club is to be especially honored in having as a speaker, Mr. Julian C. Smith, the well-known executive of the Shawinigan Water and Power Company.

Men will do well to get their tickets as soon as possible, thereby greatly lightening the load of the Club's "Exchequer Department."

FAR FROM IT

The story is told of a famous Boston lawyer who, one day after having a slight discussion with the judge, deliberately turned his back upon that personage and started to walk off.

"Are you trying to show your contempt for the court, sir?" asked the judge sternly.

"No, sir," was the reply, "I am trying to conceal it."

SUMMER TRIP FOR STUDENT IS OFFERED

Private All-Canadian Student Tour Planned

BY MAJOR NEY

Under the Direction of British Overseas Education League

Yesterday at one o'clock in the R. V. C. Common Room, Major Ney addressed the Undergraduate Society on the proposed Student trip to Europe. This tour is under the auspices of the Overseas Educational League which has already organized many Teachers' Tours through this is the first undergraduate tour that they have attempted.

Major Ney explained the two fold purpose for conducting this tour: first to establish a stronger bond between the different Canadian Universities through the meeting together of their students; and in the second place to strengthen the ties of affection between Canada and her two mother countries England and France.

The preliminary estimate of the cost is three hundred and twenty-five dollars. However there is a provision made that if on the return to Canada any funds remain they will be returned to the individual students. Similarly if the cost of the tour should prove more than three hundred and twenty-five dollars, each individual will be liable to an additional levy of not more than twenty-five dollars to meet the expenses.

The students will sail on the "Metagama" from Montreal on June 26th. The entire third class section which ordinarily accommodates between sixteen and eighteen hundred people has been reserved for the use of the student body which will number in all about two hundred so that there will be no chance of over-crowding. The party will return on the "Empress of Scotland," sailing on August 16th from either Cherbourg or Southampton which of these two it is not yet definitely known. On this ship the third class is divided into two sections, fore and aft. One of these divisions will be reserved for the students and they will have deck-space and dining-room separate from the other third class passengers.

A most attractive programme for the six weeks to be spent overseas has been arranged. The party will visit Glasgow, and Edinburgh, with a trip to the Burns country, and also through the Trossacks, thus seeing Loch Katrine and Loch Lomond. They will also visit the English Lake District, Stratford-on-Avon, Birmingham, where one of the newer English universities is situated and also Oxford. Here the tour will spend a week during which time the ladies of the party will be accommodated at St. Hilda's College. A trip will also be made to Cheltenham where there are two well-known public schools to be seen. The party will spend two weeks in London where they will visit many points of interest, including the British Empire Exhibition. A few days will also be spent in France, which trip will be included in the original fee. Paris and probably the Battle Fields will be visited.

This trip is open to undergraduates and to graduates of not more than two years standing, applications should if possible be sent in before the end of this month as it is necessary that the authorities know how many students for whom they must make arrangements.

most spectacular which the Food and Drug Laboratories have done, has been for the narcotic squad of the North West Mounted Police.

On one occasion the experiments performed by the Laboratories' staff verified the alleged usage of an empty post on a subway as a cache for morphine and, to the great delight of the R. C. N. W. M. P. officer, secured the conviction of a notorious trafficker in narcotics.

Mr. Couture brought his paper to a close by saying that the Food and Drug Laboratories were not there to find fault with the methods of Canadian manufacturers but to prevent careless or unscrupulous individuals from doing injury to the public.

Dr. Greaves gave a demonstration of a new type of filter, a stream-line filter which was sent over last year by Dr. Hole-Shaw. In this filter liquids can be filtered off from their impurities. For instance, the casein and fat can be separated from milk. Dr. Greaves briefly explained the principle of this filter and said a few words about the large commercial methods of its use.

Among others Drs. Rutten, Eves, Evans, Shaw, Maas, McLenn, Bleier, and Halcher took part in a short discussion after Mr. A. Papineau Couture's address.

STEPHEN LEACOCK SPEAKS ON NOVELS

"New Matters in Literature and Drama" was the subject of Stephen Leacock, noted humorist and economist in his lecture delivered at HM and Forum, Ann Arbor.

Picking up his train of thought where he had left off at his last visit to Ann Arbor, Mr. Leacock began with a pointedly satirical comment on the modern "crime story." His whole subject seemed to center about the question: "What to do with the hero-lone?" He derided the description of that character as "a mere slip of a girl," and recommended that she be at least of large proportions. "Slush" was the predominant word employed by Mr. Leacock throughout his critique of the crime story. He read an outline of a crime story of his own. The satire was pointed, but carried with it such humor as to remove all possibility of a sting.

Having criticized the existing best seller, Mr. Leacock proceeded to explain the new schools of his own development. The first, the radio school, had the emphatic advantage, he contended, of making the conclusion very simple and entirely devoid of slush; the hero or the inevitable heroine had only to "cut out" the other to end the narrative. The second new school was called the physiological school, and through this medium, the speaker took the opportunity of satirizing the modern tendency to describe classes at great length.

From literature, Mr. Leacock next turned his attention to the drama. He read a play which he ascribes to himself, written in collaboration with Isben. His parody of Isben's style was amusing in a high degree.

Changing for a moment into a more serious vein, Mr. Leacock called the modern triangle novel, "tommyrot." His earnestness in treating this topic could not be concealed by the light humor with which he spoke of it. His power of mimicry showed the ridiculous character of the triangle type of plot.

Music, for obvious reasons, is prohibited during certain hours within University precincts.

An Oxford undergraduate, who had transgressed the laws by playing his piano when he should have been studying the classics, received the following note from the Dean:—

"Dear Mr. Johnson—For purposes of discipline, I am bound to regard your piano-playing as music."

"What!" he said, to a friend who prides herself on her dinner parties. "Another new cook? Why, what's the matter with the last? Thought you said she was good?"

"Oh, yes," was the reply. "She was quite a good cook, as cooks go; and as good cooks always go, she went."
